

I have gained a lot of knowledge from the music industry. From learning how to create my own music to marketing and promoting songs. There is a lot I was concerned about and not sure of when I first started making music. However as time progressed I learned how to promote myself independently and become who I am today. I began making music in 2018 on June 19th. The first song I ever put out was on myspace.com, the song was a remix of T.I.'s song Swagga Like Us from his 2008 album, Paper Trails. I remembered wanting to make my own version of the song after seeing how good people's remixes of popular songs from YouTube back in the late 2000's and early 2010's. This song was one of my favourite songs of that era and ended up becoming the beginning of my music career. After I got my first 100 plays on the song, I then wanted to continue doing music for fun. From 2019-2021, I recorded many songs and uploaded them to my YouTube channel. The songs were terrible, I'm not gonna lie. But around this time I didn't really care and it was an era where there were a lot of bad songs so I'm not entirely to blame since I was just following what was going on. In 2019, I got a midi piano drum kit for Christmas from my family. This is when I began producing my own beats on my computer and learned how to use the drum pads and piano keys. The beginning of 2020 I began to get my hands on better studio equipment to further better my production and songs...
